Adolescents represent a significant proportion of all individuals responsible for sex offenses – ______% of all arrests for sex crimes and approximately 1/3 of all sex offenses against children.

Contrary to common assumption, most juvenile sex offenders have not been victims of childhood sexual abuse. The self-reported rates of sexual victimization range from 20% to ______%. Several studies have shown higher rates of self-reported physical abuse than sexual abuse.

The assumption that the majority will become adult sex offenders is ______ supported by current literature.

Most juvenile offenders differ from adult sex offenders in several ways. One such way is that sexually abusive youth appear to respond well to cognitive-behavioral and/or relapse prevention treatment, with rearrest rates of approximately ______% in follow-up periods of more than five years.

The reasons that juveniles offend is still being researched; however, common characteristics seen in juveniles that recidivate include ________________.

Juveniles who sexually offend are a diverse group. Some come from well-functioning families; others have familial situations that reveal ________________.

Although males still constitute the higher number of offenders against children; females do commit child sexual abuse. Females under the age of 18 account for ______% of forcible rapes committed by adolescents and 7% of all juvenile arrests for sex offenses, excluding the category of prostitution

Answer Choices –
7, not, 90, 1, highly chaotic or abusive backgrounds, 17, 55, definitely, 30, deviant sexual interests and treatment completion, 90, deviant sexual interests and treatment non-completion